1. Each selsovet (village soviet) has a military registration office (VUS, voyenno-uchetnyy stol), which is usually run by the selsovet secretary. The VUS is subordinate to the rayon military commissariat (RVK) which is in the center of the rayon. The military registration office at the selsovet has two registration books: one for officers of the reserve living in the village, and one for reserve enlisted men and sergeants. The secretary also keeps a separate list of persons of pre-military age. The registration books contain the following information: the individual's last name, first name, and patronymic, date of birth, whether a party member, education, military registration number, and the date of his registration.
2. The military registration office keeps only the names of those subject to military duty and carries out all orders of the rayon military commissariat. The latter usually calls up individuals for military duty through the military registration office of the selsovet. All documentation (the issuing of military identity cards) is provided by the rayon military commissariats. The military registration office issues no documents whatsoever.
